Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Minutes North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association, Sixth Annual Meeting Many wonderful cures were effected and to commemorate them temples were built containing tablets giving the names and genealogy of the patients the diseases and method of treatment. The only regular practitioners of antiquity were the Priests of these temples. It was an hereditary Priesthood and called the Priesthood of csulapius. In Liter times, however, the pupils of these Priests, being initiated into the mysteries of medicine, became regularly trained physicians, and were allowed to practice. In civilized Europe during the Middle Ages, Apothecaries were a privileged body. They belonged to a distinct organization, and in a number of places were different from the Druggists. By royal charter in England, they still have a corporate existence, with the right to license members, who have the privilege not only to prepare and sell, but likewise to practice medicine. In France the old corporation of Apothecary Druggists, which formerly existed, has been dissolved, and a new corporation styled the Pharmacians has been established, whose members have the privilege to keep shops, prepare medicines and make up prescriptions, but no legal right to practice as physicians. In our own country much greater latitude has been given with respect to the preparation, sale and practice of medicine; but, more recently in many of the States legislative restrictions have been thrown around both the practitioner and the public, to the manifest protection of the one and safety of the other. The art of choosing collecting preserving and preparing medicines, is Pharmacy, and, it has been said that the various operations of Pharmacy have for their object the rendering of medicines more effective...
